A Petite Maitresse

Not much is known of the relationship between Marie-Louise and the King, but we know that Marie-Louise was a Petite maîtresse from early 1753 to late 1755. After a few months, Marie-Louise had a miscarriage aged around fifteen; this nearly cost Marie-Louise her life which seemed to make the King oddly happy as he thought this proved Marie-Louise's affection and devotion.

The maîtresse-en-titre was the chief Royal mistress of the king of France. The title came into use during the reign of Henry IV and continued through the reign of Louis XV. It was a semi-official position which came with its own apartments. In contrast, the title petite maîtresse was the title of a mistress who was not officially acknowledged. From the reign of Louis XIV, the term has been applied, both in translation and in the original French, to refer to the main mistress of any monarch
