Could you sleep, knowing the danger? The tranquil air of a Sussex vineyard is shattered when a holidaying couple are found riddled with bullets. It has all the hallmarks of a mob hit or a drugs deal gone wrong, but DI Angus Henderson isn't so sure. Investigations reveal someone else had booked the same week at the holiday house as the victims, but cancelled at the last minute. Is this the breakthrough the DI craves, or a sideshow to stop him investigating the vineyard owner who consorts with serious criminals? The case drives Henderson inevitably towards a ruthless individual, one who will kill anyone interfering with his business, or someone getting too close to members of his family.

Would you write a book, if you knew it would kill you? Stuart Livermore, a successful Brighton author, is found brutally murdered. Was this the revenge of a vicious enemy, or a burglary gone wrong? Problem is, the victim had no enemies and if this was a robbery, why was the lounge the only room targeted? Items from a bookcase scattered across the lounge floor, indicate to DI Angus Henderson of Sussex Police, the killer was looking for something. If so, what? Did he find it? Henderson's new boss, CI Sean Houghton, is keen for a quick result, but he's becoming frustrated with the slow progress of the investigation. In the end, he snaps and hands Henderson an ultimatum - find the killer or be replaced by someone who will. In a tense race against time, Henderson has less than a week to save his job and reputation - and track down a killer he believes will strike again. At Kadena Air Force Base on Okinawa, Angus and sixty-two other young Marines stand at the tail of the huge airplane, a Hercules, that will take them on the last leg of their journey to Southeast Asia. The flight has been held up for about twenty minutes for a late arrival. When the man finally shows up, Angus is startled by his appearance. He's wearing faded, frayed fatigues, carrying an old green canvas bag in one hand, and a long, leather case in the other. He wears a strip of camouflaged cloth tied around his head, and pulled down level with the top of his eyebrows. His hair is long, almost reaching his shoulders. While Angus stands there gawking, all the young Marines walk up the ramp past him. Before Angus realizes it, he is standing there alone, the last passenger to climb aboard. There were a few vacant seats left, but he decides to sit next to this late arriver. It might prove to be interesting. Next stop, Viet-Nam.

Biography of Gippsland explorer and pioneer, Angus McMillan ; includes chapter on McMillan's position as Protector of the Aborigines (p. 149-153).

A photographer is abducted from her rural studio. DI Angus Henderson finds several witnesses, but no motive. He's convinced the answer lies in Cindy Longhurst's busy lifestyle: her previous boyfriends, her environmental campaigning or in the photographs she took. Problem is, her back catalogue runs into millions. The discovery of her body on a beach near Brighton elevates the kidnapping to a murder, but the crime scene offers few clues. Henderson reluctantly instructs the team to search through Cindy's photographs. Looking for what? He doesn't know. In time, they discover a secret that could unlock this case - but it's dirtier and more dangerous than he ever imagined.

George Edward Stanley's powerful Night Fires explores the influence of the Klan in 1920's Oklahoma, and the danger of succumbing to peer pressure.
