Taking a cue from Steve Jackson Games, this one requires two d10's (percentile dice, actually) to play but they are not included. Bad form, but at least they packaged the card game in an appropriately-sized box and kept the MSRP somewhat reasonable ($20) unlike SJG's Munchkin (though I guess the big box comes in handy with all the expansions that came out for it).

I collect dice for dice sake. I think they're beautiful and show off interesting materials and geometry. But I'd love to find an excuse to actually use them. I've never played D&D and am not sure if I'm interested in playing it, but I play a lot of more casual tabletop games with friends (Ascension, Munchkin, Carcassone, Ticket to Ride, etc).
