The House of Paper (UK title: The Paper House: don't even get us started ...) is a short novella about being obsessed by books. It is narrated by an Argentine professor at Cambridge, and begins with the death of one of his colleagues, Bluma Lennon, struck by a car as she is reading a poem by Emily Dickinson.

The House of Paper (The Paper House) - Carlos Mar a Dom nguez

Thus begins Carlos Maria Dominguez's charming novella, THE HOUSE OF PAPER, a playful rumination on the nature of books and bibliophilia. Over the course of just 103 light and airy pages, including a handful of mischievous illustrations by Peter Sis, Dominguez tells the story of one man's all-consuming passion for the written word.

In "The House of Paper," the Argentine writer Carlos María Domínguez has written a wonderfully amusing account of how books can dominate the life of the inveterate collector.

Eating Karamazov - The New York Times

In other words, the printed page turns into a work of art, and the printed page turns the characters in The House of Paper into genuine looneycakes. Such that when Carlos by mistake burns up the index to his 20,000 book collection with his candelabra, he is done for: "the books now owned him... he was a martyr to volumes."

James Carlos Blake is a master of the nail-biting thriller and the literary novel. The promise of his early work comes to full maturity in The House of Wolfe, a story as contemporary as a CNN sound bite and as old as human conflict itself, with a climax that howls with the triumph of the primitive.
